CIRCUIT OF THE WORLD'S HISTORY.

THE UNITED STATES.

The President's belated appearance in National councils as a free-trade tariff reformer was perhaps necessary since continuous practice in partisanship had rendered further repetition of his glittering professions as a Civil Service reformer almost too broad a farce to be kept on the political boards. During the year a clean sweep has been made of Republican office-holders remaining as internal revenue collectors, marshals, district-attorneys, postmasters, etc. The President had a clear legal right to do this since the Civil Service law had only a restricted application to certain classes of Federal officials; but he had the hardihood to replace Republicans with Democrats while he was entertaining the country with loud declamation and symmetrical phrases about Civil Service reform. He went further and persistently evaded the provisions of the Civil Service act enacted by the last Republican Congress and first indorsed by a Republican Administration, whose practice, unlike the present Administration's, was far in advance of its professions. Under that act the clerical forces of the Washington departments and of the principal customs and post offices of the country were protected against partisan molestation. Availing himself of his summary powers of removal, he has turned out Republicans indiscriminately under the pretence of unfitness. In great offices, like the Philadelphia Post-Office and the Chicago Custom House and Post-Office, Democratic partisans have been let in without the shallowest pretext of Civil Service reform; and when Mr. Higgins took so prominent a part in the management of primary elections in Baltimore that the Civil Service reformers turned against the President in sheer disgust, there was no

Executive rebuke. So hostile had the Democratic party shown itself to the cause, and so constantly had the Civil Service law been outraged in spirit that the association of reformers at its annual meeting in Newport wore the aspect of a funeral. Mr. Curtis, in his function of chief mourner, lifting up his voice in lamentation and upbraiding the Administration for its apostasy. Meanwhile, Attorney-General Garland, Pan-Electric attorney and shareholder, remains in the Cabinet as a pledge that "public office is a public trust"; Mr. Lamar is nominated to the United States bench by virtue of the meagreness of his legal experience and the bitterness of his former hostility to the Union; Colonel Vilas, who has been rigging the minor post-offices in the interest of partisan politics, is advanced to the Interior Department, and Don M. Dickinson, who is expected to deliver Michigan into the hands of the Democracy, is admitted to a Cabinet seat, where he can control a good share of the Administration's political patronage in the West.

NATIONAL LEGISLATION.

The President has come to the rescue of the free traders when their influence in Congress is seriously impaired by the reduction of the Democratic majority in the new House. In the closing session of the XLIXth Congress the tariff question was disposed of early in the year by the refusal of the House to take up the Morrison bill. Since the free-traders could not meddle with the tariff they determined to prevent the introduction and consideration of all measures for the reduction of internal revenue taxation. In this they were so successful that the President was able when the Lth Congress opened to make the unmanageable surplus revenues a pretext for recommending radical tariff reductions. The last House was absolutely controlled by Speaker Carlisle, Mr. Morrison and Mr. Randall. They refused to allow important measures which had passed the Senate to be discussed, and even held back the appropriation bills until the last moment to be carried with a rush under pressure of the menace of an extra session, when it was too late to allow the Senate adequate time for considering them, especially as new legislation was saddled upon them. The appropriations amounted to $248,568,630 84, in comparison with $235,573,993 63 for the previous year. The River and Harbor, Fortifications and General Deficiency appropriation bills failed, the last measure on account of the determined refusal of the Senate to allow $25,000 expended by the Department of Justice in superfluous telephone litigation instigated by a speculative ring with which the Attorney-General was connected to be taken from the Treasury. The House smothered the Blair Education bill, the Agricultural Department bill and various practical schemes for the reduction of internal revenue, for the fortification and defence of the coast and the improvement of foreign mail facilities. The most important laws enacted were the act regulating the count of the electoral vote, the Anti-Polygamy bill, the Interstate Commerce bill, the Retalia-him among Union soldiers. This feeling was intensified by the President's letters to the Albert Sidney Johnston Monument Association of New-Orleans, and to the Calhoun Monument Association of Charleston, and finally by the order for the return of the rebel flags held by the National and State Governments. This order was issued on the recommendation of Adjutant-General Drum. It directed that letters should be addressed to the Governors of all the States, offering to return, if desired, Union and rebel flags alike which had been captured during the war. The recommendation was made orally to the President and discussed in Cabinet; but the subject was hastily reconsidered and the order rescinded when an outburst of popular condemnation followed the denunciation of Commander Fairchild and Governor Foraker and the action of various bodies of the Grand Army. The illegality of the proposed procedure was not more marked than its impracticability. The captured rebel flags were Government property and the Executive had no right to dispose of them without authority from Congress; and as the Confederate State Governments which originally owned them had ceased to exist there were no official custodians entitled to receive them. In consequence of the freedom, not to say passion, with which General Turtle and other Grand Army men criticised his action in this matter and in the veto of the Dependent Pensions bill, the President refused to attend the National Encampment at St. Louis, thereby emphasizing the fact that he was not on speaking terms with the soldiers. The Encampment, which was held late in September, disclosed a nearly unanimous feeling in opposition to the veto of the Dependent Pensions bill. A similar measure providing pensions for sol-tion act, the Mexican Pensions bill and measures authorizing suits against the United States, except for war claims, and providing for the retirement and recoinage of the trade-dollar, with a mischievous amendment added by the House requiring the additional coinage of $2,000,000 of silver every month. Congress adjourned on March 4, leaving the question of the disposal of the surplus open, with general instructions for the Administration to purchase bonds at the rate of $10,000,000 a month. In this way capital was to be accumulated to enable the President to rush in December to the rescue of the depleted party of free traders and to urge the revision of the tariff in preference to all measures for reducing internal revenue.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE SOLDIERS.

The House had refused to grant Mrs. Logan a pension, but it had united with the Senate in liberal legislation for the benefit of soldiers. The President vetoed a large number of private pension bills and when the Dependent Pension bill passed both houses by large majorities, he returned it with a message which Union veterans generally construed as betokening indifference to their claims, if not positive contempt. He had signed the Mexican Pensions bill, which embodied the same principles, but considered it necessary to discriminate against Union veterans. The enactment of both measures might have been criticised on the ground of expediency; but the selection of Southern veterans of the Mexican War for exclusive favor created a strong prejudice against the fishing season. Two vessels and several boats were seized by Canadian officials. A United States squadron, nominally sent north for the protection of the fleet, was employed for a month in distributing circulars among the fishermen informing them of the arbitrary prohibitions of the customs officials. Admiral Luce was rebuked by Secretary Whitney for aiding the Canadian Coast Guard in keeping American vessels out of port, but his policy tended to prevent the recurrence of outrages, and was thus in accord with the purposes of Secretary Bayard, who was bent upon making a diplomatic settlement in defiance of the resolution passed by the Senate in January. The British Government appointed in the autumn Mr. Chamberlain as Chief Commissioner to negotiate some form of settlement of the Fisheries question. He was joined in November at Washington by Sir Charles Tupper and the British Minister, Secretary Bayard appointing Dr. Angell and Mr. Putnam either as commissioners or negotiators to confer with them. The result of these secret conferences is not known, and the authority of the President to appoint the American commissioners is questioned. In Behring Sea several British sealers were seized during the season for poaching in American waters in defiance of the Revised Statutes relating to Alaska. This action of the revenue officials seems to conflict with positions taken in Secretary Bayard's correspondence with the British Government in relation to three vessels seized in the same waters during the previous year. If American rights have been upheld by his colleagues, Secretary Bayard can be probably depended upon to negotiate a facile surrender of them. At the same time Secretary Fairchild, who succeeded Secretary Manning on March 31, has already succeeded without diplomacy in admitting a foreign monopoly, the Canadian Pacific Railway, to a remunerative share of the transcontinental traffic by bonding its connectives whose physical disability can be distinctly traced to actual service in the army has received the approval of an overwhelming majority of the posts, although there is also a strong movement in favor of service pensions, either uniform or graded. The President was entertained in St. Louis after the Encampment had closed, and subsequently he visited Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Memphis, Atlanta, and other cities, being received everywhere with cordiality and making a series of speeches chiefly of local significance. He had previously attended the centennial celebration of the adoption of the Constitution at Philadelphia.

INTRIGUES IN FOREIGN INTERESTS.

If the Administration has incurred the hostility of Union soldiers and American industries during the year it has industriously earned the good will of foreign interests in Canada and England. The Senate on January 24 passed by a vote of 46 to 1 a Retaliation act for the protection of the American fishing fleet against outrages on the Dominion seaboard. This measure was hung up in the House Committee on Foreign Affairs through the intrigues of the State Department. Two rival schemes of retaliation were brought forward by Chairman Belmont and Secretary Manning, and great pressure was brought to bear by the Administration against any legislation on this subject. The Senate bill, notwithstanding this scheming in the British interest, was passed by the House, and the President armed with full power to deny Canadian vessels the privileges of trading in American ports, if corresponding commercial rights were denied to American vessels in Canadian ports. These powers were not exercised, although American vessels were refused their commercial rights in Dominion ports during the time of steamers on the Pacific Coast. This great privilege was granted without reference to the abrogation of Article XXX of the Treaty of means in his power the issue of small and other silver notes, so that the amount in circulation has been increased. During the later months of the year he also adopted the expedient of depositing large sums with banks, so that the amount on deposit, $18,133,923 at the beginning of the year, has risen to $43,366,604. Mainly by these devices the currency in circulation has been increased over $50,000,000 during the latter half of the year, although the retirement of the last of the 3 per cents in July terminated the possibility of using the surplus in the payment of bonds: and purchases of bonds in the open market, though made to some extent during the fall, proved of little avail in turning money to general circulation. The deposits with banks have taken money out of the Treasury. It is true, but have failed in a measure to restore it to commercial and industrial uses, for, being placed with institutions generally at or near speculative centres, and loaned by the banks on short time or on call, the money has mainly contributed to swell the funds available for speculative but not for industrial employment. The extension of circulation has stimulated the most violent speculation in products. The wheat collapse at Chicago in June caused the failure of many firms there, the collapse of the Fidelity Bank at Cincinnati, with several firms, and finally the stoppage of the San Francisco Board of Trade and the enforced reorganization of the Nevada Bank.

The domestic and the foreign trade of the country have both been affected unfavorably by extraordinary activity in speculation. While exports have exceeded those of 1886 by about $10,000,000, probably amounting to $722,000,000 so far as can now be judged, the imports have risen fully $50,000,000, probably reaching $713,000,000, so that, in place of the excess of exports over imports

Washington or to the insolent denial to American fishermen of the treaty privilege of sending their cargoes by rail under bond from Canadian to American ports.

Some of the best work of the Administration has been done in the Navy Department, where contracts have been awarded for three cruisers and two gunboats and designs prepared for two armored cruisers, and where a new American industry has been founded by the arrangements made for the production of gun steel and ship armor on a large scale. Two of the Roach cruisers have been completed and have proved to be unexpectedly fast. Commissioner Sparks, of the Land Office, having succeeded in rendering the Administration unpopular in the Far West, was forced to resign in consequence of disagreements with Secretary Lamar. The House bill for the repeal of pre-emption, timber and desert acts would have left claimants no redress for the Commissioner's decisions if the Senate had not defeated it. The attempts of the Commissioner to suspend the operation of settlement laws enacted by Congress created so much prejudice that it became necessary not only to conciliate settlers by striking at the land-grant railroads, as was done in Secretary Lamar's decision restoring the indemnity lands of the Atlantic and Pacific Company to entry under the settlement laws, but also to obtain a new head for the Land Office. The President deserved credit for appointing commissioners under the experimental Interstate act, who wisely determined to administer it in a conservative spirit. These commissioners were Thomas M. Cooley, William R. Morrison, Augustus Schoonmaker, A. F. Walker and W. L. Bragg.

CURRENCY AND TRADE.

The United States Treasury pursued during the year the same policy which Secretary Fairchild adopted in the summer of 1886, after Secretary Manning became disabled. He has hastened by all

LABOR MOVEMENTS.

It has been a year of many strikes, as of towering speculation. An unusually large proportion of the strikes ended in failure, and this, with the quarrels between different organizations, has made the year one of peculiar disaster to organized labor. The influence of orders has waned remarkably, and the number of active members has greatly decreased. The strike of freight handlers and Old Dominion hands in January, and the strike of carpet weavers in that month, were followed by others in great number, so that some considerable strikers were in progress in every month of the year. The boot and shoe workers in many Massachusetts towns began a strike in February which continued at various points for more than six months; the carpenters, bricklayers and men in other building trades at Chicago began a struggle in April which with varying fortunes in the different trades continued through most of the year; the great lockout of stove moulders began in April, and at St. Louis did not collapse until September; the brassworkers of Newark, and silk dyers of Paterson, and ore handlers of Cleveland, had strikes early in the year, and the great leather lockout at Newark affected business for several months; the coke workers of the Connelsville region struck May 5 and surrendered July 20, though some disputes afterward arose; the anthracite miners of the Lehigh region struck for higher wages August 30, and the struggle has not yet ended; the glass workers began a contest in August, and asked arbitration in November; the spinners at Fall River have several times made demands and part are now on strike; and the brass workers and book and job printers here, and miners in Indiana and Illinois, and printers at Rochester and St. Louis, and 5,000 shoe amounting to $50,000,000 in 1886, that excess has probably been about $10,000,000 in 1887. Nevertheless the specie returns show a large movement toward this country, imports of gold having exceeded exports in eleven months by $34,000,000, while exports of silver have exceeded imports by $8,700,000. When it is considered that undervaluations, interest and other unreported items, probably balance about $120,000,000 of the exports, it appears that not far from $135,000,000 of foreign capital has been transferred to this country during the year for speculation or permanent investment, some part of which is liable to be withdrawn in case of political or financial disturbance abroad, or depression of industries here.

Domestic trade has been larger on the whole than in any previous year, though swelled to an extent not easily measured by speculation. The exchanges at all clearing houses have probably been about $51,150,000,000, exceeding those of 1886 by $2,000,000,000 or nearly 4 per cent, but in November a small decrease occurred, followed by a heavy decline in December. Railroad earnings and tonnage movements show a small increase over the previous year, but, owing to the peculiar operation of the Interstate law, these form a less valuable indication than in previous years of the volume of business. The greatest of domestic industries suffered from a partial failure of crops, resulting from the widespread drought during the growing season. It has been estimated that the loss in yield, had prices remained unchanged, would have made a difference of more than $500,000,000 to the farmers, but it has been in part compensated by a rise in prices of food products, amounting to about 19 per cent since July 1. Though the farmer had disposed of a considerable portion of his crops before the larger part of the rise was realized, it has helped him materially, and also brought great profit to intermediate traders at the expense of consumers.

rowest margin. The elections of the year have been favorable to the Republicans outside of New-York. Rhode Island lost through feuds in April was regained in November. In Massachusetts, Ohio, Michigan and other Western States Republican majorities were increased, and in New-Jersey there were most encouraging gains. New-York remained Democratic, the excellent record of the Republican Legislature in sending two High-License bills to the Governor being frittered away by lack of courage in handling the issue in the autumn. The Labor vote for Henry George was much lighter than had been expected, owing to the return of purchasable Democrats to the regular party, and also to the hostility of the Roman Catholic clergy to Dr. McGlynn, his chief ally, who had been deposed from the priesthood for refusing to go to Rome at the summons of the Vatican. There was a most lavish use of money in New-York City contributed in the interest not only of the saloons but also of the boodle Aldermen, three of whom had been convicted during the year, with Jacob Sharps, of the crime of bribery. The Prohibitionists lost ground in the elections of Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, Georgia, Tennessee, Texas and several Western States, but made trifling gains in New-York and Massachusetts. The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Kansas cases was a notable triumph for them.

The crowning event in the politics of the year was the President's message, in which the customary summary of the business of Executive Administration gave place to an academic argument in favor of tariff revision. While repudiating the idea of raising the theoretical question between makers at Philadelphia, and the workers on sugar plantations in Louisiana, have engaged in strikes during the latter half of the year. It was fitting that a year so disastrous to the influence of labor organizations ended with the abortive attempt to stop the operation of the Reading Railroad. On the whole, the year cannot have brought to organized workers any increase of wages to compensate for contests more numerous and costly than are often crowded into a single twelve-month. At the same time a potent influence on the side of law and order has been exerted by the execution of the condemned Anarchists in Chicago and by criminal proceedings against such agitators as Most. These are moral triumphs for public opinion in a free country of greater importance, if less fascinating in interest, than such notable victories for the American flag as were achieved by the Yankee Volunteer over the Scotch Thistle.

ELECTIONS AND THE MESSAGE.

The Democrats made desperate efforts early in the year to secure control of the United States Senate. The Republicans held twenty-six seats, including Senator Riddleberger's, and elected Senators in Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New-York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and Wisconsin, making thirty-nine in all. The Democrats, starting with twenty-six, elected Senators in California, Delaware, Florida, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia—thirty-six in all. Two seats more were gained by the Democrats after prolonged struggles and discreditable devices in New-Jersey and downright fraud in Indiana. The Republicans retain control of the Senate, but only by the nar-

Protection and Free Trade, he virtually made this the dividing issue between the two great parties. Referring to the increasing surplus as the ground for immediate action, he opposed reduction of internal revenue taxation and urged large additions to the free list of imports, the abolition of duties on wool and raw materials and reductions on all necessities. The message reproduced many of the familiar arguments for free trade, and in its phrasing and tone disclosed an utter want of sympathy with protection. It was immediately hailed in England with loud acclamation as a staggering blow aimed at the American economic system. From Paris within twenty-four hours came the acceptance of the free trade challenge. Mr. Blaine in The Times's interview subjected the message to most destructive criticism and explained in detail how the surplus could be reduced without injury to American industries and without entailing permanent loss upon American workmen. The Republican party was greatly invigorated throughout the Union by this masterly reply; and with the impulse to organization imparted by the Convention of Republican Clubs in New-York, and with a direct issue made between the parties, the prospect of the Presidential year opens most cheerily.

THE MILITARY EMPIRES.

There have been several war panics on the Continent, and the military armaments have been materially increased, but peace has reigned throughout that vast barrack known as Europe. The first war scare was deliberately created by Prince Bismarck for political effect. The Reichstag, while willing to increase the army by 41,000 men, was determined to restrict the operation of the seven years military scheme to three years. Herr Von Stauffenberg's amendment to that effect was adopted January 14, by a vote of 186 to 154, the minority comprising Conservatives, Imperialists and National Liberals; and the majority the Catholics and Progressists. Prince Bismarck, who had delivered an ominous speech forecasting war with France, issued an Imperial decree dissolving Parliament. The electoral campaign was vigorously conducted by the Government. A war panic was brought on which sent down securities with a rush in every European exchange. The Pope's aid was invoked against the leaders of the Catholic Centre and the Vatican became Prince Bismarck's chief electioneering agent. The election on February 21 resulted in a signal triumph for the Government. The Progressists or New Liberals met with heavy losses, all their leaders except Herr Richter and Herr Virchow being unseated. The Catholic Centre retained its strength fairly well in spite of the Vatican's election bulletins. The National Liberals under Herr Von Bonin scored the largest gains. The Government groups had a clear majority of forty-three seats. There were 100 National Liberals, thirty-nine Imperialists and eighty-one Conservatives, against ninety-seven Centralists, thirty-four New Liberals, fifteen Protesters, eleven Socialists, four Guelphs, fifteen Poles and one Dane. The aggregate Socialist vote disclosed an increase of 500,000. The seven-years' army bill was passed early in March, only forty-eight votes being cast against the second reading. The rank and file of the Centre revolted against their leaders. Prince Bismarck's victory was complete. Germany found relief from the tension of political excitement in effusive demonstrations of loyalty and patriotism in honor of the Emperor's ninetieth birthday.

The Chancellor's election debts were paid in full at the session of the Prussian Diet. Many laws which had become inoperative were virtually repealed. The new ecclesiastical law reserved some privileges to the State. Bishops were not allowed to appoint clergymen against whom the Government might protest on civic or political grounds. This was a concession from the Curia which the Centralists vehemently opposed, but it was one of minor importance, since a clergyman against whom the Government should enter a protest might be appointed vicar by a bishop. The new law reinstated all the ecclesiastical orders and congregations occupied with works of charity, which were suppressed by Dr. Falk, and swept away many other restrictions imposed upon the Church. The abandonment of the May laws marks the most decisive defeat sustained by Prince Bismarck in his career. The fiscal laws were the most conspicuous measures passed by the Reichstag. A new consumers' tax on brandy and spirits was levied with the expectation that it would yield a large revenue. A bill abolishing the tax on raw beet-root material and substituting a tax on sugar for consumption was also passed. The treaty regulating commercial relations between Germany and Austria expires December 31, but has been renewed provisionally for six months until some compromise can be effected between German food-producers, who want increased duties on corn and Hungarian farmers who wish to export breadstuffs freely. The Reichstag assembled on November 24 to receive a message from the Emperor respecting the Crown Prince's cancerous ailment, which threatens to shorten his life and to make his sickly son, Prince William, heir to the throne.

THE BULGARIAN STRUGGLE.

Russian diplomacy has been worsted all the year in its struggle to regain prestige in Bulgaria. For six months the National Assembly pursued a cautious policy, sending a delegation to the European capitals and maintaining self-composure when the Czar successively nominated Prince Nicholas of Mingrelia and the Duke of Leuchtenberg as candidates for the throne. Revolts in Silistria, Rustchuk and other places were promptly suppressed by the Regency, and unusual severity was exercised in punishing the traitors. On July 3, patience having ceased to be a virtue, the Assembly elected Prince Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg Prince of Bulgaria. He entered the Principality late in August and was well received. Russia pronounced his election invalid, opposed his pretensions from the outset, endeavored to induce the Porte to eject him, and threatened to denounce the Treaty of Berlin. France was markedly hostile to him, Austria and Italy were very cool, and Prince Bismarck railed at him as an Orleanist intriguer; but Prince Ferdinand held his ground, and, forming a strong Ministry under Stambouloff, steadily improved his position. The Porte agreed to royal edict and stipends are now paid from the budget of Public Worship. Payment was made in Treasury bonds for the landed possessions of the Propaganda Fido, confiscated by the State. While the Vatican and the Ministers of State have their own reasons for concealing their purposes, it is evident that protocols for a lasting peace advantageous to both have been exchanged. With the Catholics now thronging to the polls in municipal and parliamentary elections, in obedience to the Papal summons, a reconciliation is almost necessary for the Ministers and the Monarchy. This policy was not openly avowed in the Pope's letter of instruction to Cardinal Rampolla, who succeeded Cardinal Jacobini as Secretary of State; but it is in accord with the Vatican's recent dealings with Prince Bismarck and intimates the only adequate explanation of the many compromises quietly effected during the year in Italy.

The repulse of the Italian expedition operating in the direction of Kassala from the Red Sea precipitated the fall of the Depretis Ministry in January, but after Count Robilant, Tarini and Biancheri had successively declined to undertake the Government, the Premier returned to office to die under harness within a few months. Signor Crispi succeeded him, reorganizing the Ministry, forming an alliance with Germany and Austria against Russia and meeting the Chambers in November with a full budget of reform legislation. His programme is an extensive one, embodying many features known as Radical crochets, along with many proposals of the highest utility such as local government reform, a uniform penal code, prison reform, a sanitary code, encouragement of thrift among working people, the establishment of banks of issue, regulation of emigration and improvement of the schools. Premier Crispi's frank intonances after his return from Germany revealed the substi-sord Artin Effendi to Sophia in order to assume control of affairs and to prepare the way for General Eruroth, whom Russia was anxious to appoint as Regent. Italy, England and Austria resisted this preposterous scheme and it was abandoned. In order to test the forces of National opinion elections were ordered in October, and these resulted in the return of 260 out of 292 seats for the Government. Zankoff, Karaveloff and other Russian leaders were defeated. There was fierce rioting in several towns, and the number of abstractions was great, but Prince Ferdinand received overwhelming support from the nation.

In consequence of these elections Count Kalnoky, in addressing the Delegations on November 5, asserted that all danger of foreign interference had been warded off from Bulgaria and that Prince Ferdinand had been legally elected, although his title had not been confirmed by the Powers. Austrian prestige has increased in the Balkan, as Russian prestige has decreased. The Premiership of Risties, leader of the Russian party in Serbia, has not proved so decisive a defeat for Vienna as the continuance of Prince Ferdinand on the Bulgarian throne has for St. Petersburg. The Hungarian elections resulted in the usual Government triumph, 224 Liberals being chosen against 38 Moderates, 59 Independents and 24 of other factions. Increased armaments were voted early in the year by the Delegations.

ITALY AND THE VATICAN.

The Quirinal and the Vatican, while proclaiming the impracticability of reconciliation, have been co-operating for mutual advantage. Compromises have been the order of the day in the relations of Church and State. The tithes levied for the maintenance of parish priests have been abolished by tution of Italy in place of Russia in the Three Emperors League. His declaration that Italy had every reason to dread the advance of Russia to Constantinople could have no other meaning.

FRANCE.

The French Chambers have dismissed from public service two groups of Ministers, two Premiers and a President. The first Ministry to be discharged was that of M. Goblet, which had been formed in December, 1886. The Budget Committee set the seal of its disapproval upon M. Dauphin's financial proposals for the issue of bonds redeemable in sixty-six years to meet temporary needs. This, like all previous ministerial projects for funding the floating indebtedness with which the Treasury is constantly embarrassed, was rejected, the Deputies preferring to pass a resolution in favor of new measures of retrenchment. General Boulanger obtained ample supplies for the War Office; and an import duty of five francs per hundred kilos of wheat and of eight francs per quintal of flour was authorized. The tax on imported food was raised to 25 per cent ad valorem in response to demands from the agricultural classes for increased protective duties. With these measures the Ministry's financial troubles were compromised until May 17, when a vote of lack of confidence was passed by 275 to 259, the Budget Committee insisting upon larger reductions of expenditure than the Ministry could make. The arrest of Schnaebelé, a police commissary at Pagny, threatened for a fortnight to disturb the Republic's relations with Germany, but he was released by Prince Bismarck when the illegality of the act was proved. Subsequently a French gamekeeper was killed by a German soldier on the frontier, but the excitement caused by the incident was allayed by an expression of regret from the Berlin Foreign Office and the payment of a liberal indemnity to the widow.

The new Ministry, headed by M. Rouvier, was formed after M. de Freycinet, M. Floquet and M. Duclerc had declined the Premiership. President Grevy determined to dismiss General Boulanger at every hazard, since Ministers refused to serve with him, and confessed their inability to govern the country without him. General Boulanger retired quietly from office and was ordered to the command of an army corps. His challenge to M. Ferry to fight a duel brought him momentarily into prominence, but his popularity steadily waned from the day of his overthrow at the War Office. The mobilization of an army corps, which had been one of his final projects for promoting the efficiency of the military establishment, was carried out with satisfactory results during the autumn. The Ministry while depending for support upon the Monarchists and moderate Republicans proved unexpectedly efficient. On June 25 the Deputies sent the Seminarists to the barracks by a vote of 373 to 173. M. Rouvier secured a majority of the Republicans in two critical divisions aside from having the support of the Monarchists. An ill-timed manifesto from the Count of Paris in September was received with contempt and derision and tended to strengthen the Ministry. M. Rouvier met the Chambers in November with a proposal for the conversion of 4½ per cent bonds into 3 per cent bonds. This was voted by a large majority, together with a second project authorizing a new loan for the repayment of bondholders who should reject the Government's offer. These financial reforms did not save the Ministry from shipwreck. It grounded on the shoals of the Wilson investigation, resigning on November 19 in consequence of a hostile vote of 328 to 242.

President Grevy's troubles began with a grave official scandal. General Caffarel was accused of

THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

The Queen's Jubilee year, celebrated with splendid pageants and memorials of her accession to the throne, has left behind it no landmark of English progress in legislation or social reform. The Imperial Institute was founded; the sovereign and her retinue of princes passed to Westminster Abbey under the eyes of admiring thousands; the naval and military reviews were magnificent spectacles; and the thousand and one minor episodes of the Jubilee week were each significant of loyalty to the Crown and affection for the illustrious Queen. But the only achievement of a long session of Parliament was the passage of a Coercion Act by which prostrate Ireland, conquered four centuries ago, could be dragged once more behind England's iron car. This was the consummate flower of British statesmanship in the Queen's fiftieth year—the re-enactment of a barren policy which had been tried decade after decade and had been proved to be a disastrous failure.

When Parliament opened on January 27, Mr. Goschen was in Lord Randolph Churchill's seat as Chancellor of the Exchequer; Mr. Smith was First Lord of the Treasury, and leader of the Commons; Mr. Stanhope was at the War Office, and Sir Henry Holland at the Colonial Office. Subsequently Mr. Balfour became Irish Secretary in place of Sir Michael Hicks-Booth. Lord Salisbury had resumed his place at the Foreign Office, Lord Idlesleigh's retirement being followed speedily by his death. By these changes the Government was strengthened for the work of the session, Mr. Smith's patience and bulldog tenacity of purpose being more useful than Lord Randolph Churchill's brilliant capacity and oratorical powers. Mr. Goschen defeated in Liverpool having taken bribes to procure decorations through the agency of Madame Limousin, an adventuress, and subsequently M. Wilson, the President's son-in-law, was charged with complicity in the same traffic and in stock-jobbing and contract speculations. The Deputies appointed a commission with unrestricted powers to investigate these scandals; but probably nothing would have come of it if the discovery had not been made at the trial of Caffarel that two letters written by M. Wilson to Mme. Limousin had been removed and forgeries substituted for them. The President's faith in his son-in-law's innocence did not affect the judgment of the Deputies, who demanded the prosecution of the offenders by a vote of 527 to 3. When the Rouvier Ministry was overthrown by a coalition between the Monarchists and Radicals, President Grovy endeavored to replace it, but M. de Freycinet, M. Brissson, M. Clemenceau and M. Goblet refused to serve under him. His resignation after a fortnight of futile dalliance with the Chamber was finally tendered on December 2.

The Chamber's meeting on the next day at Versailles elected M. Carnot on the second ballot. The Royalists divided their votes between General Sausier and General Appert; while the Republicans, after a trial of strength between M. Ferry's and M. de Freycinet's supporters, united on M. Carnot. The crisis was fraught with danger, since the Hotel de Ville had undertaken to set itself against the National Government; but the patriotism of the Deputies under M. Clemenceau's leadership and the effective use of the army in Paris prevented a catastrophe. The Chambers, by forcing M. Grovy to resign, had given one more proof of their paramount authority in the French constitutional system. Having united in the choice of an Executive of unquestioned mediocrity, the groups were at liberty to divide once more over the policy of the new Ministry of clerks, headed by M. Tirard.

jority had been reduced to 62, the Parnellites left the House in a body and the remaining clauses were voted. A proposal to limit the duration of the Act to three years was defeated by a majority of 61. The bill was reported on June 30 and was finally read a third time on July 8 after an eloquent speech by Mr. Gladstone in opposition. The majority for the passage of the Crimes Act was 87. Meanwhile, a land bill had been passed by the Upper House, nominally in the interest of tenants, but virtually a landlords' measure. Lord Randolph Churchill dealt with it most destructively and Mr. Parnell suggested radical amendments to it. The Government made great concessions, which completely changed the character of the bill, and converted it into a genuine though limited relief measure for tenants. It passed through the committee stage without encountering serious resistance, and went to the Lords, where it was amended in the interests of the landlords. The Government accepted the most important amendments under the closure rule, and the act became a law. The National League was immediately proclaimed. The Crimes Act was thus accompanied by a most meagre measure of conciliation. No other statutes of real importance were enacted. Mr. Goschen in his first Budget speech proposed a reduction in the payments to the sinking fund, thereby modifying Sir Stafford Northcote's plan for the rapid cancellation of the National debt, but remitting a penny from the income tax. The session ended late in August.

Meanwhile there were signs of reaction against the Government throughout England. Sir George Trevelyan in March had come out strongly for Home Rule with modifications of Mr. Gladstone's scheme, and subsequently he was elected from Glasgow as a Liberal. The Buruley election went against the Unionists, and the Spalding election in July was the signal for a widespread revolt against the Government. This was followed by the gain of another seat for the Liberals at Coventry and was forced to appeal to an aristocratic constituency of London for a seat in Parliament, and when he finally found himself on the Treasury bench, he was a Tory and no longer a Liberal. The Queen's speech seemed to disclose a compromise between coercion and conciliation, but as the session advanced force proved to be the only remedy seriously contemplated by the Government. The debates on the Queen's speech brought on the first test of party strength in the defeat of Mr. Parnell's amendment by a vote of 352 to 246. The work of the session opened with the revision of the rules of procedure. Motions for the adjournment of the House in order to discuss urgent motions were prohibited unless the Speaker's consent could be obtained. Such motions had been previously made with the consent of forty members. The initiative for demanding closure was transferred to any member who should secure the Speaker's consent. The debates on the revision of the rules were protracted until March 21, when notice was given of the Coercion Act.

THE COERCION ACT.

There was a preliminary struggle lasting ten days before the first reading of the act was carried, and even then that result was reached under pressure of the new rules by a vote of 361 to 253 after an extraordinary scene. Mr. Gladstone leading the Opposition into the lobbies against closure. The second reading was voted on April 18 by a majority of 101. As the debate advanced The London Times sought to influence public opinion by a series of articles on "Parnellism and Crimes." The committee stage was protracted by new forms of obstruction, only three clauses having been considered by June 11 and the prospect of final passage being apparently hopeless. The measure was then forced through the Commons by closure, the amendments being ordered to be put. After the Government's ma-

IRELAND UNDER BRITISH LAW.

Ireland meanwhile has remained unusually quiet, the support of their English allies having exercised a restraining effect upon the Nationalists. Of fifty-six Woodford rioters tried at Sligo in January, thirty-one were sentenced to terms of twelve or eighteen months' imprisonment. The trial of Mr. Dillon and other leaders accused of inciting tenants not to pay rent ended on February 24 in a disagreement of the jury, the Government having failed by ordinary process of law to condemn the Plan of Campaign. Father Keller and other priests were arrested for refusing to testify regarding money entrusted to them by tenants. The Crimes Act was enforced against Mr. O'Brien, who was arrested in September for inciting resistance to the enforcement of law at Mitchelstown. The arrest was followed by a riot in which several persons were killed by the constabulary force. Mr. O'Brien was sentenced to three months' imprisonment on each of two charges. The Lord Mayor of Dublin was acquitted on a charge of publishing reports of proceedings of suppressed branches of the National League. The case was referred back on appeal and he was sentenced to jail. Four other members of Parliament were arrested for violation of the press clauses of the Crimes Act and several hundreds of League organizers were arrested. Every effort was made by the prison authorities to treat Mr. O'Brien as an ordinary convict and to degrade him, but he offered strenuous resistance. There were several outrages of unusual atrocity in Ireland, but on the whole the island was remarkably quiet and free from crime. The use made of the Crimes Act has been wholly political. The Government is grappling with the National League, proclaiming and suppressing it as Mr. Forster succeeded in doing in his day. Members of Parliament are prosecuted and sent to jail for advocatby an increased Home Rule vote at North Paddington and in other constituencies. In seven by-elections there was an increase of 4,484 in the Liberal polls, and a decrease of 675 in the Unionist polls. While the year's elections yielded an actual gain of only four seats, the Liberals re-established their majorities of 1885 and demonstrated that with a proportionate increase of their vote they could hope to carry the country on the Home Rule issue.

The Nottingham conference held in October adopted an enlarged programme for the party, including in addition to Home Rule for Ireland, free trade in land, manhood suffrage, revision of the license laws, disestablishment of the Welsh and Scotch Churches and a system of local government based on representation, with equitable taxation. Mr. Gladstone supported these measures, disestablishment included, and reaffirmed the necessity for Home Rule, without making positive pledges respecting the modification of his measure. The Liberal and Irish members have maintained an unbroken alliance throughout the year. The Unionist alliance in like manner has been strengthened. Mr. Chamberlain delivered speeches in lister of a most uncompromising character, and Lord Hartington and Mr. Goschen have advocated closer fellowship between the Dissident Liberals and the Tories. The Oxford Conference committed the party unreservedly to fair trade, but Lord Salisbury has declared the adoption of that policy impracticable. The Tory programme outlined for the next session includes further revision of the rules of procedure and a large scheme of local government. By thrusting Irish measures aside and raising the blockade on long-deferred English measures the Government expect to wear out the patience of Mr. Gladstone, who cannot live always, and of Mr. Parnell, whose health is already shattered. The Home Rule cause, in their judgment, will not survive the loss of these two leaders.

have rendered further reduction of the garrison inexpedient. Emin Bey, abandoned to his fate in the Equatorial provinces, has successfully maintained his position in circumstances of great difficulty. An expedition for his relief, headed by Mr. Stanley, probably reached Wadelai in September from the Congo valley.

As a reward for persevering patience Lord Salisbury was finally able to announce the settlement of the Afghan frontier dispute, which once threatened to involve England and Russia in war. Russia secured the valleys radiating from Penjdeh while Afghanistan retained Khojah Salen and Chamiah. The Ameer has had to battle for his throne with revolting tribes, but has succeeded in suppressing a very formidable rebellion. The escape of Ayoob Khan from Persia to the Russian frontier was not followed by serious complications. In November he voluntarily returned to Meshed. Lord Dufferin's administration of India continues to be highly successful. There has been a terrible visitation of cholera, however, in the Northwest provinces. In Burma the work of reorganizing the government has advanced steadily. The natives themselves are now fighting the dacoits and suppressing brigandage.

The Canadian Government suddenly resolved early in January to dissolve Parliament rather than to wait for the expiration of its constitutional term. The Liberals were greatly encouraged by their successes in Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia and by ministerial dissensions, three members of the Cabinet having resigned. Sir John Macdonald reorganized the Ministry and carried the elections on February 22 with his wonted facility. His majorities in the Provincial delegations were: Ontario, 14; Quebec, 11; Nova Scotia, 7; New-Brunswick, 4; Manitoba, 3; Northwest Territory, 4; total, 43. Prince Edward's Island returned six Opposition members, but the Government had as many from the Northwest Territories. The Liberals did not venture to make free trade an ing the Plan of Campaign or for publishing reports of branches of the League. The and of the Vatican has been solicited in this campaign against agrarian agencies and political associations, but the overtures have not been well received. The Tory Government is fighting the old battle of Coercion with more cynicism and frivolity than Mr. Forster displayed, but with less vigor and patience. He failed in the end although English opinion was behind him in a solid mass. Mr. Balfour hopes to succeed when English opinion is divided and Mr. Gladstone is crying: "Remember Mitchelstown!" and Liberals are joining the suppressed League and cheerfully bearing the burdens of the Home Rule cause.

DIPLOMACY AND THE COLONIES.

Lord Salisbury, always industrious at the Foreign Office, has achieved several notable successes in diplomacy. The convention signed May 22 between the Porte and England was not ratified by the Sultan owing to opposition from Russia and France, but it was none the less a substantial gain for British interests since it released the Foreign Office from further obligations to fulfil Mr. Gladstone's pledges respecting Egypt. The convention limited the British occupation three years, while it reserved the privilege of reoccupation, with or without the consent of Turkey. As the Powers did not unite in upholding this compact it was not ratified and England was left with her hand free in Egypt. A separate agreement with France, respecting the neutralization of the Suez Canal, was subsequently made. The garrison was reduced in April to 5,000 men and the corvée or annual demand for forced labor was abolished, after resistance from France. This was a source of $1,250,000 in revenue, which had to be made up by reduction of expenses. There have been menacing movements of the tribes in the Nile valley which sadors and also to send representatives to the approaching conference in relation to the succession in Morocco. The Emperor of that great country is in precarious health and his possessors are apparently doomed to civil war unless either French or Spanish troops intervene in the event of his death. Neither nation can invade the country without exciting the jealousy of the other. The conference has been called upon the basis of a modification of the present system of protection of foreign subjects in Morocco, and the maintenance of existing arrangements for securing national independence.

Belgium has been the scene of extensive labor movements which have required military suppression. Novel legislation has been enacted on behalf of workmen, the Chambers adopting a bill by which two-fifths of the workman's pay is declared inalienable and one-fifth free from legal liability. Clerks' salaries under $240 a year are made free from liability. In Holland the franchise, which since 1848 has been enjoyed only by those paying from 20 to 160 guilders in direct taxation, has been materially reduced, although not to the extreme length of universal suffrage.

The Mexican Congress has adopted a constitutional amendment rendering a President eligible for election to a second term. A revolution headed by Castano, ex-President of Guatemala, has been suppressed after several desperate battles. The boundary dispute between Nicaragua and Costa Rica has been referred to President Cleveland for arbitration. The Panama Canal Company has reacted a desperate state of its fortunes, its sole chance of continuing temporarily a work which evidently cannot be carried to completion being the ability of M. de Lesseps to carry through issue in the canvass, but when the Fisheries Commission was appointed they started a fierce agitation in favor of commercial union, which the For press either countenanced or ignored. Mr. O'Brien's visit to Canada in May to expose the tyrannous conduct of Lord Lansdowne as an Irish landlord caused great excitement and led to violent attacks upon himself. The Dominion Government attempted in the interest of the Canadian Pacific to prevent the construction of a railway from Manitoba to the Minnesota line. Great resistance was offered by the Provincial Government; the injunction granted to the Canadian Pacific was defied by the Red River Valley contractors, and public feeling in favor of annexation was strengthened.

The elections in New-South Wales during February resulted in the return of 83 Free Traders and 41 Protectionists. The elections in New-Zealand brought in a new Government on a financial issue of reduced taxation and retrenchment. Emigration from England to Australia and other parts of the English-speaking world continues unabated. The existence of a numerous unemployed class in London has been disclosed by the menace to public peace offered by continuous occupation of Trafalgar Square day and night and the frequent demonstrations made by the laboring classes. The Government, by a belated display of firmness, has broken up starvation camp in the heart of the city, but it has not removed the causes which have produced an unusual scarcity of employment and an extraordinary amount of suffering among working people.

Address: THE TRIBUNE, New-York.

THE TRIBUNE FOR 1888.

Every Consideration of Loyalty, Safety and Public Prosperity calls for the Election of a Republican President in 1888.

PENSIONS! TEMPERANCE! PROTECTION!

THE TRIBUNE is leading in the presentation of the arguments for a Service Pension. The old soldiers need a newspaper to represent them, which is not identified with, nor an advertisement of a money-making pension agency, and this want is supplied by THE TRIBUNE. The soldiers' column in THE TRIBUNE is of intense interest to every veteran. Soldiers who have in their possession advertisements, placards, or orders, published from 1861 to 1865, in which the payment of pensions was specifically promised, are requested to supply THE TRIBUNE with copies of them.

Better protection to Farm Products against foreign competition is the need of the times. The wool-growers have been nearly ruined by the reduction of duty of 1883 and the surplus revenue has been actually increased by that reduction. THE TRIBUNE is organizing a movement to let Congress and the country know the exact wishes of the Farmers of America concerning any further reductions of duty on their products. It has applied to every Grange, Farmers' Club and Agricultural Society in the United States, for its views; and it is now about to submit their replies to a committee of representatives of agriculture, of which the Hon. Warner Miller has consented to act as chairman. A statement will be prepared showing what the welfare of the farmers demands, which will be sent to all the societies for their approval with a view to its ultimate presentation to Congress. Publication of letters from the Granges, etc., has begun in THE TRIBUNE.

Temperance is being earnestly discussed in THE TRIBUNE. In preparation for the Presidential campaign, THE TRIBUNE has just had constructed three large new printing presses of the latest and best type, worth $120,000, capable of producing 72,000 copies per hour. They will be placed in position during December and January. Thereafter the supplement sheets will be folded into place in the main sheet. Readers will appreciate the convenience of this improvement.

During 1888, THE WEEKLY will be enlarged by from 4 to 8 pages more of actual reading matter.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY already contains much more reading matter in proportion than THE WEEKLY.

Terms: THE WEEKLY, $1 a year; an extra copy with a club of five. SEMI-WEEKLY, $2 a year; an extra copy with a club of five. DAILY, $8 50.
